Description

Originally built in 1906 as one of a pair of council houses (with the first slate roof in the area to replace the traditional thatch) - extensively renovated in 2006, the cottage is now just over 101 years old, and retains much of its older character and charm. A large spacious, modern kitchen was added to the rear of the cottage, allowing more room in the "living room" for it to function as a separate lounge area. There are three bedrooms to sleep up to six, with a main bathroom and a separate en-suite. The fireplace area in the lounge still has its traditional old stove, which is now just used for heating the house instead of its original function as a cooker. (The house does have oil fired central heating as well.)
