Description

Sheskinarone Cottage, is a lovely, compact, 2 bedroom bungalow, just 2km outside Dungloe; - known as the capital of an area of West Donegal called the "The Rosses". Set in a quiet and peaceful location, but within a 3 minute drive of the town, this makes an ideal touring base for exploring the area.

The Irish name for Dungloe is "An Clochán Liath" which means Grey Stone. Prior to the construction of the bridge in 1762, entry to the town was by means of stepping over "grey stones" across the river. For students of the Irish language and culture, the area is also within the "Gaeltacht"; and is thus one of the few predominantly Irish speaking areas of Ireland.
